When Cena announced that he wanted to get a divorce, Huberdeau was allegedly blindsided.

It happened in a similar way as Katie Holmes and Tom Cruise -- Holmes filed to divorce from Cruise and he didn't even see it coming.

Cena claimed in May that their marriage was irretrievably broken.

Cena's soon-to-be-ex-wife didn't take the news as well as Cruise, as far as staying out of the media goes, TMZ reported. Huberdeau challenged their prenuptial agreement by saying Cena had been seeing other women behind her back.

But the weeks since being hit with divorce papers must have been enough for Huberdeau's shock to wear off, because she is allegedly recanting the cheating allegations.

Her attorney Raymond Rafool explained to TMZ that the couple were able to work everything out in private.

He said to the celebrity gossip site, All matters have been settled and resolved amicably.

All the terms of the settlement have been kept confidential, TMZ said, and Cena's representatives have not commented on the matter.
